In 2018, TikTok has been involved in a number of issues with regard to what people are allowed to post or not post on their platform. In January 2019, it was reported that a number of TikTok users were receiving a notification stating that the content they wish to upload would violate the app's terms and conditions if it is posted publicly. This was because the content in question was too graphic or violent. The following is a screenshot of the notification that was received by some people who tried to post an image of a self-harm victim", Unlike other social networking apps, not everyone can use TikTok publicly. It requires you to use a profile which is limited in access. If you are already a member, you can log in with your username and password using the social network's login on TikTok either via your mobile or desktop application."

On September 6, 2018, TikTok collaborated with the BBC to launch a series called "Ask Me Anything." Users were able to submit questions about anything from their personal lives to what they thought about politics. The videos were branded with BBC's logo and had a link to the channel on the app. After the videos had been posted, the company announced that they would be taking action against any inappropriate content on the app. The company said that there were "two clear issues around our policy" and that they would be working to fix it. The first was that "the app is for 14+" and that children under 14 were able to register on the app even if they did not have consent from their parents. The second issue was a lack of enforcement when it came to inappropriate content in videos. Following this event, people under 18 were no longer able to create accounts on TikTok without consent from their parents or an adult guardian. The company also said that they wanted to give young people a platform to express themselves and help them understand that they can have fun but not in a way that could cause harm to others."

In May 2018, U.S. Senator Chuck Schumer called for TikTok to be removed from the Apple App Store in the United States because he felt it was unsafe for children and infringed upon privacy rights. Schumer stated that it was "disturbing to discover that children are being groomed on this app," and argued that "there is no need for this app to exist in America, let alone on Apple's platform",
